

MAKING SUPREME EFFORT TO TURN GERMANS' RIGHT IN FIGHT AT ST. QUENTIN

PERSISTENT REPORTS INDICATE THAT THE BRITISH-FRENCH MOVEMENT IS SLOWLY DEVELOPING:

ACTUAL CHANGES

No Advantage Is Gained on Either Side On East Battle Line—Germans Reported to Have Re-Captured French Cities.

Momentous events that may decide the battle of the Aisne are transpiring near St. Quentin, where the Allies are making a furious attempt to turn the German right wing.

Vague but persistent reports wholly unofficial, but coming from such points, suggest that the British-British movement is slow-developing. However, in the absence of official claims or admissions regarding this tremendously important action, little is definitely known.

Such official references as are made to the extreme western battlefield are very guarded. An English correspondent declares that the Germans' right wing had been turned between Peronne and St. Quentin.

The British admiralty has not made public its estimates of the casualties when three British cruisers were sunk by German submarines but press reports indicate that probably from 1200 to 1500 officers and men were lost. Reports that two of the attacking submarines were sunk lack confirmation.

The German casualties so far as reported, number 63,467, according to an announcement at Berlin. The last casualty list issued last night bore 5,895 names. The deaths of General Von Wrochem and General Von Arbou are chronicled.

An official statement issued at Paris at three o'clock this afternoon says that the Allies have advanced their western wing after severe fighting. It is also declared that German attacks on the east wing of the Allies have been repulsed.

Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in chief of the Russian forces, in reporting the capture of Jaroslau, says there is no change in the situation on the northwest frontier.

It is announced officially at Nish that after a nine-day struggle the Austrians are in full retreat along the front from Laubova to Losniza.

A dispatch from Rome says that it is reported that the Austrian cruiser Maria Theresa and Admiral Stone have put into Sebenico in Dalmatia badly damaged.

A press report from Petrograd says that the railways leading to Przemyśl are held by the Russians.

Against the Jews and hand over the Jewish property and that of Polish landowners, most of whom have fled from the country. Cruelties committed on Jewish inhabitants from the Russians become worse and worse each day. This contrasts remarkably with the Czar's manifesto to his beloved Jews.

The other reads:

"It has been said that the export of goods from Germany is possible, and that consequently neutral countries would get goods heretofore imported from Germany from other countries. The passage of goods over Russian roads had been resumed and there is no reason why goods should not be exported with the exception, of course, of those the export of which had been forbidden because of the war. The export trade of Germany will be resumed in a large measure in the near future.

Fighting Near Amiens.

London, Sept. 23.—The Amiens correspondent to the Times telegraphs that heavy fighting is in progress not many miles southeast of Amiens. He says:

"The beginning of a decisive phase of the battle of the Aisne. Upon the issue of this fighting depends the continued occupation of French soil by the German invaders or of their retreat to strongly entrenched positions which have been prepared for them on the Somme."

Wireless From Berlin.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The German embassy today received the following wireless from Berlin:

"The French offensive spirit is weakening. The French losses are enormous. Their center is retreating. Verdun is being successfully bombarded, the effect of German mortars being again tremendous."

FALL OF JAROSLAU INDICATES SUCCESS OF RUSSIAN FORCES

CAPTURE OF AUSTRIAN STRONG-HOLD IS MOST IMPORTANT VICTORY IN DAYS WAR NEWS.

ADVANCE ON PRZEMYSL

Advance of Czar's Armies in Galicia Continues Without Interruption, According to Late Reports.

London, Sept. 23.—The fall of Jaroslau, the Austrian fortified position in Galicia, is regarded here as the most decisive strong news announced from the European battlefield in the past twenty-four hours. The Russian occupation of this important fortified railroad center is considered in London as likely to have a greater effect on events in the west area than anything reported from France for several days past.

The Russian army which took Jaroslau by storm is in hot pursuit of the Austrians who are reported to be retreating on Cracow. As Przemyśl is now isolated, it seems probable that the Austrians will be content to mask this fortress while they push on to Cracow with the view of joining their forces preparatory to a march in the direction of Breslau.

Further north the Russians, according to information reaching London, have resumed the offensive against the Germans in East Prussia, and they are reported as again preparing to attack Koenigsberg, the ancestral home of the kings of Prussia.

AIR FLEET ATTACKS ZEPPELIN HANGARS

Five English Aviators Execute Daring Maneuver at Bickendorf Near Cologne.

Antwerp, Sept. 23, via London.—A successful raid by a squadron of five English aviators to the German aviation camp at Bickendorf near Cologne, is reported by the Handelsblad. Bickendorf is the center of the Zeppelin air fleet which was taken to the story the British, from the heights of 1,500 feet, dropped bombs that set fire to the hangars. Four of the aviators returned to the point of departure while the fifth was obliged to descend, owing to engine trouble. He succeeded in landing in Belgium.

FREE MASONRY POWER WAR INCIDENT SHOWS

Ostend, Sept. 23.—The power of free masonry is illustrated by a story told here by a citizen of Louvain, who with a masonic sign says he saved fifty of his fellow citizens from being shot to death by German troops.

This group of citizens according to the recital of the Belgian mason, had been lined up for execution. The German firing party had their rifles at "present arms" when the narrator gave a masonic sign. The German officer commanding the firing squad hesitated to belong to the craft. He recognized a brother mason and ordered the Louvain free masons to leave the ranks. This meant sparing his life. The Louvain citizen however, refused, saying:

"My fellow citizens are no more guilty than I am. If you are going to kill them, I shall be killed with them."

The German officers thereupon ordered the release of the entire party.

The harvest festival is in reality a county fair held in the city with displays in the various store windows of the business section of agricultural and industrial exhibits. A carnival is held in connection with the festival.

DESPATCHING TROOPS A SERIOUS PROBLEM

English Successfully Solve Problem at Southampton, Where Troops Are Sent to Continent.

Southampton, Sept. 23.—The despatch of troops from Southampton continues, but the movements are now kept less secret than during the previous time. The docks here place afford more than one and a half miles of water front, with railway lines so close to the ships' docks that it is but a moment's work to transfer trains from the railway to the steamships. The precision with which the transfer was made was so marred that an entire train was frequently unloaded in three minutes, and it was not uncommon for twenty trains to enter the docks and complete their task of unloading within a single hour.

The plan had been worked out by the war office two years before. The small cars dropped down in such a manner that the animals stepped out without the slightest confusion. Some Americans who witnessed this movement remarked that the cars were more practical for this sort of work than the large freight cars used in America. Into which a number of horses were crowded.

Scores of hospital cars still line the dock tracks here ready for the reception of sick and injured returning from the continent. Red cross signs are displayed and surgeons and nurses are in the cars with everything ready for the wounded. The hospital cars are made up of converted passenger coaches and sleeping cars. All have the small compartments common to English railway coaches with doors opening at the sides. Litters are provided which will enter these small side doors and consequently it is much easier to place the seriously injured in berths than it would be if it were necessary to carry them through the cars and along narrow aisles and hallways.

Baggage cars have also been converted into hospital cars, where patients can be placed who need attention of sort which can be rendered more satisfactorily in a roomy car than a small compartment.

SURVIVORS OF WRECK LANDED IN HOLLAND

Ynauuden, Holland, Sept. 23.—Via London.—This little seaport is all excitement over the landing here of 287 survivors of the British cruisers sunk in the North Sea by German submarines. The men were brought here by the Dutch steamer Flora, which happened to be in the vicinity of the fighting. The captain of the Hogue was said.

The streets were crowded in the vicinity of the hotel where the survivors are staying, and the hospital where 20 wounded are being cared for by the Dutch Red Cross.

From the outside of one of the hotels the crowd could see a number of British sailors enjoying a meal at a long table.

The men were dressed in all manner of clothing, mostly from the light store which the Dutch sailors of the rescuing boat possessed.

BRITISH AFRICANS ANXIOUS TO SERVE

General Botha, Premier of South African Union, to Take Command in Field.

Pretoria, South Africa, Sept. 23.—The decision of General Botha, premier of the union of South Africa to take the field personally in command against the forces of Germany, has aroused much enthusiasm here. The government in its announcement says that it is aware that many citizens are anxious to serve with the British forces on the continent, but the imperial government considers that priority should be given to the South African military requirements.

MAPS SHOW EUROPE AFTER WAR IS OVER

Interesting Documents Received in St. Louis Show Germany Reduced to Size of a Duchy.

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Two maps sold by the publisher of the "World" show the view of the maker, Europe will look after the war, have been brought to St. Louis by August A. Busch, who recently returned from Germany.

One map is that of "Europe if Germany wins." The other represented the way Europe may look if the allies win.

The map which pretends to represent the desire of the allies, shows Germany about the size of the present boundaries of Luxembourg. The boundaries extended westward to include Berlin, Leipzig and Dresden, and the boundaries of France extend to include not only Alsace and Lorraine, but also Munich, Prague and Vienna.

ARMIES OF SERBIA PUSH INTO BOSNIA

Official Statement From Nish Tells of Full Retreat of Austrian Forces.

Nish, Serbia, Sept. 23.—The following official statement has been given out: "After a nine days' struggle the Austrians, whose wings have been broken, are retreating in full retreat along the whole line from Laubova to Losniza. The Serbians are pushing them vigorously. Serbian columns from Visegrad and Baina Bash continue their progress into the interior of Bosnia."

While I was on my way to the remaining cruiser rolled over and sank. When I arrived I was pleased to find that two Lowestoft cutters had rescued the hands of the Cressy. They were pulling men out of the water. One boat was full of men and other men were struggling all around, but they were nearly exhausted and numb from the cold. The other was clinging to the wreckage. One group was clanking around a floating table.

"The Flora picked up over 200 and the Lowestoft boats rescued others before I came up. One of the Cressy came up to rescue, but she took away some of them to England. Those engaged in the work of rescuing had to row among floating naked bodies."

AMBASSADOR CLAIMS JAP WAR INEVITABLE

Baron Von Shaon, Former Envoy at Tokio, States Japan People Believe War Will Come.

Washington, Sept. 23.—An interview published here and attributed to Baron Von Shaon, former secretary of German affairs at Tokio, not attached with the embassy here, dwelt upon the probable war between the United States and Japan, and was called to President Wilson's attention today by administrative officials. After Secretary Bryan talked with the president on other matters, he said he had seen the interview, "but nothing had been done about it."

It quoted the baron as saying:

"You may safely say that the mass of the Japanese people believe that war with the United States is inevitable, but throughout the Japanese have intense hatred of the American people."

The interview attracted a good deal of attention in official quarters.

REMOVE WORKS OF ART FROM LOUVRE MUSEUM

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The following dispatch from Geneva appears in a number of the German papers: "For three weeks extensive preparations have been made to remove the art treasures there against bombs from Zeppelin balloons. Most of the paintings are being packed away in iron boxes. The Venus of Milo and the Mona Lisa were locked up in steel vaults. The Greek saloon with the masterpieces of Phidias is laid out entirely with bags of sand. The upper stories of the Louvre were cleared of their contents and changed into a military hospital from which no fugitives are to be expected. Numerous paintings were removed from the Luxembourg Museum to the old Seminaire."

ENGLAND MAY TAKE AGGRESSIVE ON SEA FOLLOWING LOSSES

BRITISH ADMIRALTY MAY BE ROUSED TO ACTION AS RESULT OF CRUISERS' SINKING.

ACCOUNT OF DISASTER

London Times Correspondent Sends Story of Dutch Ship Captain Who Helped to Rescue Drowning Sailors.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—Reports received by the German admiralty show that the destruction yesterday of three British cruisers in the North Sea was accomplished by the German submarine U-9, single-handed. The submarine U-9 was built in 1910 at Danzig. She is of 300 tons and her armament consists of three 18-inch torpedo tubes and two 1-pounder guns. Her speed submerged is eight knots.

London, Sept. 23.—The swift and silent destruction of three cruisers which cost $12,000,000 has brought home the risk of modern naval warfare. The unknown danger upon the Atlantic, the Hogue and then the Cressy, and one after another the cruisers rolled over and sank. The whole affair was over in 20 minutes. The survivors have been brought to British ports declare that there were three German submarines in the attacking force, some say five.

SAVOY CAFE

For Bad Burns.

Don't thrust a burned foot or hand into cold water. It relieves for a moment, only to be followed by an increase of pain, peeling off of the outside, and very frequently by ulceration of the wound. Don't tie up in a dry cloth; all woven material is porous and admits air. Don't drag off the clothing. Don't rub or cut off the hanging skin. Your object when called upon to treat a burn is at once to exclude air. For this purpose nothing is better than oil of some sort. Paraffin is not a bad thing, or vaseline, or common olive oil, or lard and butter, if both be entirely without salt. —First Aid for Everyday Accidents.

Chinese Maze of Canals.

The canal system in China is the most extensive in the world, with the exception of Holland. Wherever the lay of the land permits the Chinese have made a canal. Thus they are enabled to carry the products of their labor to market at a minimum expense.

"Could you sing that song about the twilight when the flickering shadows softly come and go?" said the sentimental youth. "Sir!" exclaimed the lady at the piano. "I don't approve either of the current fashions in gowns or of the promiscuous references to them."

Reliability

is what a doctor must be assured of in recommending a food or drink. He must know that it is honest, efficient, pure and wholesome.

In cases of nervousness, heart flutter, headache, biliousness, indigestion, etc., where the patient is a coffee drinker, most doctors order: "Quit coffee and use Postum."

Doctors recommend Postum because they know that it is a pure food-drink—absolutely free from the drug, caffeine, which makes coffee injurious to most users.

It is significant that thousands of physicians not only recommend, but themselves use —its worth having been fully demonstrated, not only in the home, but in Sanitariums, Hospitals and Colleges.

POSTUM

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled—15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—soluble—no boiling—made in the cup with hot water, instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are delicious—cost per cup about the same—sold by Grocers everywhere.

TRAVEL IN WAR TIME BEREFT OF PLEASURE

W. S. JEFFRIS TELLS OF EXPERIENCES IN JOURNEY FROM ATHENS TO ENGLAND.

MAROONED FOUR TIMES

Party is Delayed in Greece, Austria, Italy and England, Causing Much Worry and Inconvenience.

Anxiety to return to American shores, to greet once again the flag of the free, to throw off the disgusting horrors of war preparations—all this mingled with the youthful spirit of adventure of the typical American girl featured the protracted journey of W. S. Jeffris, his wife, daughters, Katherine and Margaret and Mrs. T. M. Jeffris and daughter, Ruth, in Athens, then in Trieste and Genoa, finally reaching England and off for "God's country" once again, when the cares and worries of the war period had ceased and the romance and venture some reverie of the girls were haltingly interrupted, then and only then did the entire party realize the nervous strain of days and weeks they had experienced.

So had they want to see once again dear old American shores, to greet the flag of the free, to throw off the disgusting horrors of war preparations—all this mingled with the youthful spirit of adventure of the typical American girl featured the protracted journey of W. S. Jeffris, his wife, daughters, Katherine and Margaret and Mrs. T. M. Jeffris and daughter, Ruth, in Athens, then in Trieste and Genoa, finally reaching England and off for "God's country" once again, when the cares and worries of the war period had ceased and the romance and venture some reverie of the girls were haltingly interrupted, then and only then did the entire party realize the nervous strain of days and weeks they had experienced.

Abroad in June.

The party left Janeville in June, landed on the European continent at Cherbourg, France, and following a visit to the small villages and towns, went on to Paris. It was while the Jeffris party was in the republic's capital that Archduke Ferdinand and his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, were assassinated on Serbian soil. Archduke Ferdinand will be remembered as being of Austrian birth, and it was this act of the Serbs which prompted Austria to demand, in an ultimatum, a thorough investigation, by Austrian officials only, and in the country which Austria held were detrimental to her welfare. Serbia refused. Austria declared war, and little by little the great powers of Europe were drawn into the strife.

The party left Paris shortly after the double tragedy and crossed southeast into Switzerland, and then down through Italy. At Rome they saw the late Pope Pius X., and received his blessing.

First of War Signs.

"Crossing over into Greece the first of the great events of the war were encountered," relates Mr. Jeffris. "We had our passage booked to Constantinople and everything arranged for a visit in the land of the sultan. We were to arrive in Athens and here we found upon landing, the declaration of war on Serbia by Austria. We thought little of it at the time, but when we saw the late Pope Pius X., and received his blessing, we knew that the war was on." "We could not read the Greek newspapers and could gain little information. We sought out the American consul and he advised us to stay away from Turkey as this nation was liable at any moment to be drawn into the conflict and to be drawn into the conflict to Venice.

"We finally got to Venice after a trip in a small Adriatic steamer. Boats were already being abandoned to tourist travel to move troops, and we were extremely anxious to get away from Greece when we did.

"Of the passengers on the ships were reservists and officers of all countries returning to war on one another. Kathryn could speak French and German and her knowledge of the languages was a great help.

"On the boat were several German officers with whom we became acquainted and they very graciously planned to take our entire party into Germany in their private car when we landed. They did not, however, as it was later found that conditions were such that it would have been impossible to enter Germany. We found on landing that Germany had been drawn into the conflict and this spoiled our trip with the German officers.

"There we were in a serious predicament. We finally arrived at Geneva and spent a week there. From our hotel to the American consul office we tramped back and forth for seven days. We with hundreds of other Americans made this our stronghold, waiting for word from Washington. The consul had no messages from the United States for nearly two weeks. The belligerent governments had taken over the telegraph and cable lines and here, too, the wires were being kept open for government use only.

"Austria censured the mail at Trieste and none left the country for a great while. We could not write or telegraph our whereabouts and this was the case of thousands of other Americans.

"We got away to Trieste in Austria-Hungary. As a whole we were suffering few hardships. The only thing that troubled me was the safety of the women. A man can do a whole lot in a case of this kind alone, or in company with others of his sex, but when the ladies are along, it is another proposition.

Warship Target Practice.

"Near Pola, the Austrian naval base, we had the great pleasure of seeing two Austrian warships in target practice. They needed it. Their target was about five miles away and from the observations we made they may have hit the big square canvas, hung out of sight of the ship, but we could not vouch for this accuracy of the Austrian gunners. Anyway, they were nearly always wide of the mark and after watching the shooting for awhile we had to think a while about what our Jackies had done at Vera Cruz.

"The Adriatic was mined. Just before reaching Pola we were warned by an Austrian torpedo boat destroyer to avoid the mine field and made a turn at right angles to pass safely the mined section.

"It is said that the entire country surrounding Venice is mined and wired against the invasions of Austria in Italy.

Americans Hire Ship.

"A number of wealthy Americans chartered a ship at Genoa for $200,000 and picked their passengers for the trip. It was this incident that caused so much dissatisfaction among many Americans who laid the blame at the door of the American consul because they were not permitted to get away on this chartered ship. As it was, no blame can be made against the government official, as he had nothing whatever to do with the sending of this vessel. It was privately chartered and the people who were behind the deal had the right to pick their passengers and also charge their own price which we refugees were gladly willing to pay for our exit from the war zone. A report was circulated that the boat was being sent out by our government and this gave rise in a way to the criticism against the manner in which Americans left Genoa.

"On the British liner Celtic we got away from Italy. The English government had chartered the ship to bring home British refugees and tourists. After waiting two days for a party of 300 who were supposed to be on their way from Switzerland, some of our Americans were taken aboard after arrangements had been made with the British war office. We were in the steerage but all accommodations were for one price, first, second and third class and steerage. We had the freedom of the boat. A number of ladies after midnight on the first day of the trip, the men slept at the bottom of the deck rather than sleep in the close, cramped and ill-smelling quarters below.

"The next day a number of Englishmen relinquished their cabins to the women and for the remainder of the journey the men slept as best they could.

"There were no room stewards and so everybody turned in and helped with the work. English and Americans formed their own committees and parceled out the work for each respective man or woman. We policed the boat in shifts. Next to me in my steerage bunk was John Clair Minot, who is the editor of the Youth's Companion. He, with his wife were caught abroad also.

"Mr. Minot was writing for the Boston Herald and only this morning received a paper in which his first sketch was printed.

"We blanketed all our lights and had an excellent passage and there was no seasickness whatever on the trip. I am still wondering what we would have done had the sea been rough and no regular stewards on board to care for those who would be effected with the sickness.

Before leaving Genoa everybody purchased towels and soap and blankets and for the remainder of the trip we had no regular stewards on board to care for those who would be effected with the sickness.

Only Gold is King.

"Of course, like all of us we had great difficulty in securing money that was good for its face value. Gold was the only kind of wealth that would be accepted and this in many cases was discounted. Letters of credit were no good whatever. American Bankers' Association and American Express company's checks were good. In contrast to this were the checks on the Hamburg-American line. They were worthless and Germany was a war zone.

"Greece was excited over the war and we saw many troops in the country while we were there.

"In Italy soldiers were traveling in all directions. Concentration was the main object of the Italians. Demonstrations of the populace were everywhere, with police and government officials having much trouble in quelling the disturbances and saving Italy from being drawn into the conflict.

Everywhere in England men and boys were drilling. One day we saw thousands of young men, recruited from the London business houses and stock exchanges, drilling in Trafalgar Square. In every town similar conditions prevailed. On the trains we saw the soldiers and sailors and cavalry and field guns and all war impediments being moved.

Belgian Refugees Arrive.

"A most pathetic sight was the arrival at Charing Cross station of the Belgian refugees. They were mainly women and children, the former with their babies in their arms and others unable to walk or struggling along with their mother's side. What stories they could tell. A brother or father of son killed, their humble dwelling destroyed by the raking of shells, here they were, mute evidence and remnants of one of the most heroic stands ever made in the history of the world against an invader. Belgium's defense is surely on par with that of Thermopylae.

"How the crowd cheered. For hours they were packed like sardines in the wide streets. There were myriads of men and women and children all screaming and shouting in joy.

Down the stairs tripped a Red Cross nurse. In her arms she held a tiny babe. How the multitude greeted her. I shall never forget.

"Fear of the Zeppelins and their bombs led to the decision to issue the proclamation that all unnecessary lights of towns and cities were to be extinguished at nightfall. England was making no chance with German aircraft, and the bombs, which wrought havoc at Antwerp and Paris.

English Believe Atrocities.

"Regarding the stories of German atrocities in Belgium, every word printed regarding the offenses in Belgium. 'As every paper in England is full of stories of the horrors which were reported to be eye witnesses to devastation and inhuman deeds of the Germans. London papers and other country papers were printing cuts of photographs of uncalculated destruction and everything seemed to point against the emperor's troops as unmerciful in their march through Belgium.

An idea as to how the nations suppressed all news is shown that it was not until ten days after the burial of Mrs. A. W. Jeffris that the party learned of her demise.

Receive Pope's Blessing.

"It was on Sunday, July 12, that the party was in Rome and saw the late Pope Pius X. They were in St. Peter's court. The aged pontiff appeared in a balcony and gave his blessing to the multitude below. There was a band present and to the tune of the Pope's hymn a great gathering lifted up their voices in general accord and sang it with fervent and lovely inspiration. Above him and to his right were the two sisters of the pope. Two Swiss guards were at his side as was another attendant.

From Mr. Jeffris' observations the pope did not look sickly. He appeared in good health and a good complexion and showed effects of no worry at that time as the conflict in which so many of his innocent Catholic children were to march to doom, had not yet broken.

Nervous Strain Worst.

"Our experiences were not in the least startling, said Mr. Jeffris. The only thing that was anxiety and nervous strain resulting from the thoughts of remaining in these war-torn countries until the war would end in good health. We traveled day after day to consular offices to hear of word from home. The arrival of the battleship Tennessee with gold for the American tourists was a good omen. It was now a matter of time that our own United States was lending a helping hand.

Just American Girls.

"The girls were of the opinion that something exciting should be ought to happen to them. They wanted to be captured and lodged in jail, just for one night, just for the experience. They had read in the papers of the adventures of the Red Cross girls and that their much thought of blood curdling adventures were not realized. They continually talked of things romantic and would have enjoyed immensely the capture by a German man-of-war.

"We were glad to get home safe, and sound in health, although the excessive strain we underwent is enough to break us down. But is now a thing of the past. We are glad to be able to talk about it."

BOY CAUGHT BY CAR
DROWNED AT BELOIT

Clyde Pringle, Age Six Years, Falls Into River Off Beam On Interurban Bridge As Car Goes By.

Several Janeville people who were passengers on the twelve o'clock interurban car to Beloit yesterday had the unexpected experience of seeing a six-year-old boy, named Clyde Pringle, meet his death by drowning in Rock river at the interurban bridge going into Beloit.

The boy was returning to school from his home at noon and on the way across the trestle bridge was caught by the approaching car. Standing on a cross beam, about one-third of the way from the east end of the bridge, the boy became nervous and started as there was insufficient room for the interurban to pass him safely. A passenger on the car stripped his coat and dove after the drowning child but could not reach him.

The body was found an hour later about fifty feet from the bridge. The boy's parents reside on the Cranston road.

WILLMANN ATTENDS
EPISCOPAL COUNCIL

Janeville Clergyman Named on Special Committee on Lay Deputies.

Rev. Henry Willmann, of Trinity Episcopal church, was appointed a member of the committee on lay deputies at the opening of the sixty-eighth annual diocesan council of the Episcopal church in Milwaukee on Tuesday. Other members of the committee are: Rev. A. E. Larrabee of Nashotah and Rev. R. D. Winter of Milwaukee.

Bishop Doane, of Wisconsin, addressed to the council urged a student chapter at the state university. He said he did not favor the plan of combining the offices of parish priest in Madison with that of student pastor. He advised that they be kept separate and quoted another bishop as having said that the work to be done by a student pastor in a university town is worth that in forty ordinary parishes.

Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged, with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 481 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

CREAMERY SANITARY IS JURY'S DECISION

Brodhead Man's Case Dismissed in Judge Maxwell's Court Following Verdict Today.

After arguments were advanced by attorney in the action against Jacob Marty of Brodhead on the complaint of operating an unsanitary creamery at Willowdale, the jury after half an hour's deliberation brought in a verdict of "not guilty." Judge Maxwell, on the verdict's return discharged the defendant and dismissed the case.

Extensive testimony was taken yesterday. Attorneys took nearly all this morning to thresh out the points. E. D. McGowan, who defended Marty, alleged that it was through personal feeling that caused the arrest under the sanitary law. In answering Attorney Dillmore's argument that mud was under the vats and on the floor of the creamery, Attorney McGowan declared it was "good Hanover marsh soil of the farmers' boots."

PROMINENT MONROE CITIZEN SUCCEUMBS

James O. Fidler, Green County Treasurer, Expires Suddenly Tuesday Evening.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Monroe, Wis., Sept. 23.—County Treasurer James O. Fidler died very suddenly at his home here at eleven o'clock last night. He had been down town until late in the evening and was stricken while retiring. His four years of service as a county officer would have expired on Jan. 1, 1914. At the recent primaries he was nominated for clerk of the circuit court by a large majority over Max G. Booth. He was about 45 years of age and is survived by three sisters.

URGENT STRICTER LAW PROTECTING DEER

Seek Amendment to Game Laws to Give Deer Chance to Gain Numbers in Northern Woods.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Sept. 23.—A determined effort will be made in the next legislature to amend the game laws so that deer may be better protected during the northern woods a chance to fill up again, according to word from the deer counties. Petitions are now being circulated calling upon assemblymen from that district to present the desired amendments.

According to R. W. Reise of Coudery, citizens of the northern counties want deer hunting prohibited for a period of two or three years. They desire a law permitting hunting only in the county in which the license holder resides.

There are reasons for this attitude, said Mr. Reise. "We are constantly endangered in the northern woods during the hunting season by city people and amateur hunters who are responsible for the innumerable accidents."

"Now there are only about five counties in which deer can be found. The hunters swarm, and the deer are driven across the state line into Michigan. If it keeps up it will be only a few years before all the deer will be driven out of the state or killed off."

The deer season should be cut down and the penalties for violation of the laws made more severe. I have seen many as three half-pickled skeletons left lying in the woods where reckless hunters, having shot more than the law allows, and being unable to transport their kill, have let the carcasses lie. They shot the animals merely for the sport."

"Price, Ashland, Oneida, Rusk and Sawyer counties will join in the protest and fully 75 percent of the voters in these districts will sign the petitions."

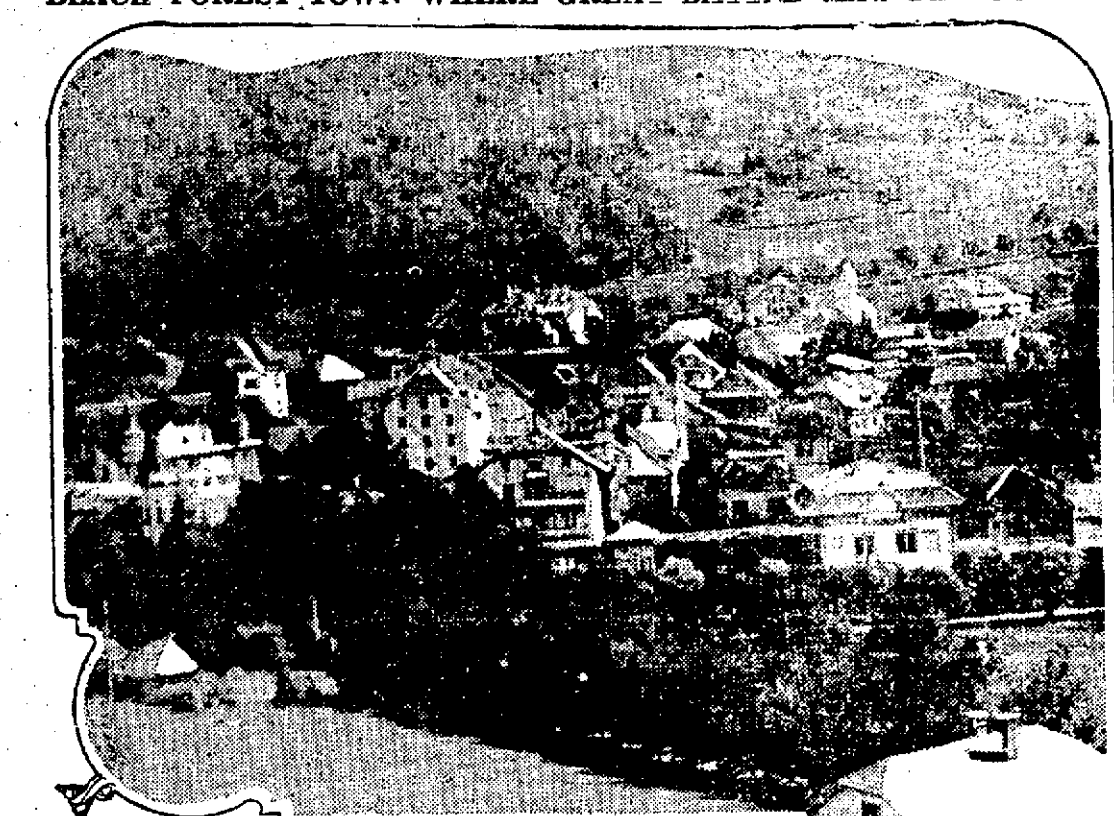

Real Things of Life. Conventional orthodoxes, whether they be of manners, or of ways of life, or of thought, or of religion, or of education, are unimportant. What then remains? Courage, and patience, and simplicity, and kindness, and beauty, and last of all, ideas remain; and these are the things to lay hold of and to live with.—A. C. Benson.

Home-Made Ointment. The following is a recipe for a simple home-made ointment, which is excellent for applying to cuts and bruises: One teaspoonful each of olive oil, turpentine, spirits of camphor and coal oil. Of course, any amount desired may be made, but the proportion must be as given here.

Not a Pleasant Occupation. A citizen who believes that a certain thing should be done called at the Globe office and said, "You can scold the people into doing it." But we do not wish to become a common scold. People are becoming tired of having others tell them what they should do.—Atchison Globe.

KILL IT.

Under the title "Notice of general election," appears the nine constitutional amendments to be voted on by the people in November. This notice appeared in the Gazette last Saturday and is a correct report of the circulation of the Janesville Daily Gazette for August, 1914, and represents the actual number of papers printed and circulated.

The most, if not all of them, are bad and should be killed. In order to make them more prominent and give the voters a vote intelligently, the Gazette will publish each day on the editorial page with expression of opinion concerning its merits or demerits. The state of Wisconsin is fortunate in having only nine. Oregon and California will vote on more than forty.

The first amendment follows. It will be understood that these amendments have been passed by the legislature, and only require the endorsement of the people to make them laws.

AMENDMENT NO. 1.

To add Section 13 to Article VIII of the Constitution, relating to state insurance.

Whereas, at the biennial session of the legislature for the year of 1911, an amendment to the constitution was proposed and agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, which proposed amendment is as follows:

"Resolved by the assembly, the senate concurring, That there be added to article VIII of the constitution a new section to read: Section 13. The state may not insure upon such risks and in such manner as such insurance is prohibited by law, and the limitations or restrictions provided in the constitution shall not apply to this subject; but provision shall be made for annual accounting for all liabilities assumed, and for the separation and safeguarding of all funds and property held by the state on account of any such insurance."

Resolved by the assembly, the senate concurring, That the foregoing proposed amendment to the constitution of the state of Wisconsin be, and the same is hereby agreed to by this legislature.

Note. (If adopted, this amendment will confer upon the legislature express power to enact legislation providing for state insurance.)

The principal demand for state insurance is to make a place for a lot of patriots who aspire to attach themselves to the pay roll. While the people have been good to this class of aspirants, there is a limit to good nature, and it is time to call a halt. We already have a state life insurance company existing for existence, which should never have been permitted to exist.

The principle of state insurance is wrong, because it puts the state, with public funds, in competition with private business. It smacks of government ownership and is a safe thing to let alone. The amendment is a good one to kill by voting "no."

WHY NO?

"After Belgium, is the United States to be the war goat? Is it to be the Jeff of the situation—the Jeff who plaintively asks, 'Why me?'"

We have no war. If we had one we could understand a war tax, and we would pay it cheerfully; but it certainly is annoying to be compelled to pay a war tax when we have no checks in the game.

This is a neutral country. To be sure, so was Belgium at the beginning, but we have no such invasion as occurred there. We are not at war and we are not being over-run, yet we are going to have to pay a war tax."

Why? To meet a governmental deficit caused—not by the war—but by the tariff.

This deficit was born before the war. Receipts from duties on imports were declining heavily long before the war started. As a matter of fact, the new tariff law tinkerers stated they expected the customs revenues to fall off, so they put in the income tax.

The trouble is not the war. It is the tariff and governmental extravagance. Having revenues and yet without reducing the cost of living, the only proper way to meet the deficit was to prune down the expenses. On the contrary, we find they have run riot, the Belgium platform to the contrary notwithstanding.

During the first fiscal year of the Wilson administration the ordinary expenses of the government amounted to seven hundred and one million dollars. The last fiscal year of the Taft administration they amounted to six hundred and fifty-four million dollars. That difference alone represents a large sized chunk of the deficit it is put in the money with this "war tax."

The "Boise Statesman" thus elizes upon the situation on the proposed war tax, and the sentiment expressed will be endorsed by all thinking people. The nation is suffering financially from democratic incompetency. The party is in full swing with all of its free trade tendencies.

As the writer very truthfully says: "Our revenue has been reduced without reducing the cost of living," and this is putting it very mildly. Some of our industries have been killed and others seriously crippled by unwise legislation.

The loss of revenue from the sugar industry alone is more than fifty million dollars, and if anyone is benefited, the fact has not been discovered. No disposition is shown to correct errors. Roosevelt out in Kansas doing what he can to aid in perpetuating the farce. If it were to be a time when the nation needed good, level-headed business management, that time is today. The people have enough of politics and a vaudeville performance by congress in perpetual session.

A MODEL CITY.

Anyone who has had the pleasure of a drive through the streets and parks of Rockford, will admit that the city is making rapid strides in growth and development. Public playgrounds, including golf and tennis courts, are features of the new parks recently opened, and liberal patronage indicates how much they are appreciated.

This rapid and healthy advancement includes a lot of new homes, many of them modest cottages occupied by industrial workers, who through thrift and economy have gained a competency. The well-paved streets, extending out in all directions from the business center, are evidences of civic pride and intelligent city administration.

Many people said, when Rockford went "dry," that the fate of the city was doomed, and the prediction was made that grass would grow in the streets for lack of liquid nourishment, but the opposite has proved true, and the people are enthusiastic in claiming that unusual prosperity has come to them because of prohibition laws.

Be that as it may, the fact remains that the city is not only forging to the front, but evidences of thrift are apparent on every hand. The surest way the city envelope now finds its way to the savings bank, and a contented and happy people throng the streets in orderly procession.

The people have money for the comforts as well as for many of the luxuries of life and the spirit of contentment is in the air. Rockford is dry by an overwhelming majority vote and public sentiment is rapidly forging its way to the front, and the conditions prevail.

It has been estimated that during the month of August, silver coin to the amount of $400,000,000, or 2,000,000,000 francs, went into board in France. The difficulty of making small change under these circumstances resulted in issuing notes of denominations from a half franc to francs.

This fractional currency is made exchangeable at the Bank of France for larger bills. If silver currency in the five countries of France, England, Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy find to about the same extent, then as much as $2,000,000,000 in silver alone, or twice the public debt of the United States, must have disappeared in little more than a month. Assuming that as much gold as silver went into hiding, the five countries must have withdrawn from circulation and from bank deposit a grand total of $4,000,000,000 of metallic currency.

President Wilson and his secretary of state, Bryan, have both invested in a bale of cotton, and recommend that every man who can spare fifty dollars go out and do likewise. This speculation on a small scale. The streets are abundantly able to take care of the cotton crop and should be encouraged to do so.

There are still rumors of a progressive state ticket and LaFollette is being urged to head the aggregation. Trot it out. The more the merrier, and the question of state control may as well be settled first as last. If the people vote as they talk, there will be no question as to results. We have dined and paid the addler and are tired of the entertainment.

The New York Stock Exchange, which has been closed for the past six weeks, will reopen for business as soon as the authorities at Washington show a disposition to grant the much-needed railroad relief. The Exchange will be flooded with railway securities which must be protected.

The problem of gasoline is becoming a serious problem. It is used so extensively by the armies now involved in war that the supply is not equal to the demand, and the army market can not offer much assistance.

ASK PUBLIC'S AID IN MAIL DELIVERY

Efficiency and Economy of Mail Service Can Be Helped by Citizens and Business Houses.

The postal department of the government is making every effort to increase the efficiency of its service and to that end asks the assistance of the public as much as possible. In increasing the efficiency of the service, the government wishes also to keep the economy feature of its administration in view in the interests of the people. With these objects in view, Daniel C. Roper, first assistant postmaster general, has just issued the following instructions to postmasters, and is hoped patrons will cooperate cheerfully with his order, as given below:

To Postmasters: It has come to the knowledge of the department that in many cities the great time of carrying mail is seriously increased by delivering mail at the rear or side doors of residences and places of business. If this is the practice at your office you should notify the patrons affected that after 30 days they must provide means for the receipt of their mail at front doors. Suggest that this means may be in the form of a small box, or a door or ordinary house box.

Experience has shown that the complete equipment of the mail receptacles will effect a saving in the carrier's time of from one-half to one hour which will obviate the curtailment of deliveries on heavy days, and by a readjustment of routes afford relief where needed."

Postoffice service in Janesville according to Postmaster Cunningham is above many cities of similar population and many which reach the 20,000 mark. Appleton, Wausau, Eau Claire and Beloit have but one delivery each day in the residential district while Janesville is given two.

The number of clerks at the local federal building is small but an efficient system of work has been used for number of years and the local men are able to do a greater amount of work than those of many other cities.

(With this accommodation to the public in general," said J. Cunningham, "it behooves Janesville people to make the mailman's burden as light as possible, erect boxes as the nearest and most convenient points of their homes and business places and in a general manner co-operates with the department in the continuation of an efficient service.

Banking System May Be Changed As Result of European Conflict

Washington, Sept. 23.—Changes have been made and others are pending today in the banking and currency system of the United States as a result of the European war. Many congressmen declare they could not have been put through congress in a year's past had it not been for the emergency which war created. Some of the very things that have been done already or are now pending, were suggested when the present banking and currency law was under consideration, particularly in the senate.

One particularly important provision which has already been adopted as a result of the war was that removing the so-called 40 per cent government bond restriction. Under the Aldrich-Vreeland bill as passed the banks which complied with the requirements with regard to organization into clearing house associations and in other ways could issue emergency currency, even if they had already 40 per cent of their capital and surplus already outstanding in ordinary bond secured circulation. In other words, if a bank had not already issued that amount of currency under the old plan, it could not benefit under the new.

The provision was inserted in the old Aldrich-Vreeland act as much to protect the market value of the bonds as anything else. It was to encourage the banks of the country to hold 40 per cent of their capital and surplus in government bonds, so that they could issue currency by them, and be in a position to take advantage of the new currency plan. This, however, did not suit many of the larger banks of the country, particularly those of New York, which thought that the purchase of large blocks of low interest bearing government bonds, the value of which was recognized to be declining, would be a poor investment. Their judgment in this respect has been justified by a substantial decline in the price of bonds, which did not encourage other banks to buy them. In an emergency, however, these banks found themselves shut out from the opportunity to issue currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland plan. To relieve them congress has removed this restriction.

It is a matter of some debate whether another step which Congress took at the same time—that of permitting state banks to issue currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland bill if they would agree to join the federal reserve board later—accomplished anything. It is the opinion of the treasury department another amendment or act will have to be passed to take care of the situation. It seems that in permitting state banks and trust companies to issue currency under the Aldrich-Vreeland bill, congress suggested to repeal an old measure which was designed to restrict to national banks the business of issuing currency. Not put out by the government direct, this imposed a tax of 10 per cent on the currency issued by banks other than national banks. Naturally, some persons in authority contend, unless this is repealed there will be very little issuing of emergency currency under the terms of the Aldrich-Vreeland bill, every state bank or trust company.

Another measure which was introduced by Senator Owen would raise the proportion of its unimpaired capital and surplus which a bank might loan on commercial paper, and still remain in the reserve system from 35 per cent to 75 per cent, while an accompanying amendment makes it clear that bills of exchange or foreign acceptance having not more than three months to run may be construed as commercial paper. This is the most important amendment of all from the view point of the cotton states, for which it was especially written.

Under this amendment the banks can loan the farmers on their warehouse receipts, transformed into bills of exchange, up to 75 per cent of the unimpaired capital and surplus of all the banks in the south, virtually.

To take care still further of the southern situation, Senator Owen also introduced an amendment which will permit to enter federal reserve system banks in towns of not more than 3,000 inhabitants which have a capital of only $15,000. Under the original act the minimum capital requirements were those formerly required by national banks, and $25,000 was the smallest capital upon which any bank could enter. Again this plan would add the cotton farmers, since a remarkably large proportion of the banking capital of the south is in state banks and trust companies in the very small towns, where the banks, as a result, are very small themselves.

These amendments, however, have met the approval of the federal reserve board because they think it would not only be of benefit to the south, but that the bringing in of these small banks would be a source of strength to the federal reserve system. It is, however, a source of strength to the aggregate of its capital and strength.

With the further idea of bringing more banks into the system than would otherwise come in, and of making possible, through this means, the issue of still more emergency currency where it might be needed, Senator Owen is urging another amendment which would extend the time in which the member banks can pay for their stock in the federal reserve banks which under the plan they would be required to buy. This would lessen the financial strain upon the banks at this time, and prevent the liquidating of many of the present assets of the banks in order to pay their stock in the reserve institutions.

WISCONSIN'S EXPORT TRADE IS DISCUSSED

GEORGE S. PARKER ATTENDS
TRADE EXTENSION MEET-
ING IN MILWAUKEE
TUESDAY.

CONSULS AID LITTLE

Consular Service Lacks Efficiency,
Speakers Declare, in Discussing Foreign Conditions.

George S. Parker of this city attended a meeting of the Wisconsin Manufacturers' committee on foreign trade, held in Milwaukee on Tuesday for the purpose of considering ways and means of expanding the export business of Wisconsin manufacturers. The meeting brought out a very considerable number of representatives of the manufacturing interests of Wisconsin and there were many interesting phases of the discussion.

In commenting on the importance of the gathering today, Mr. Parker said: "The consular department of the state which recently transferred its services from the government consular office to that of the manufacturing firm in Wisconsin, that little practical help could be expected from the consular officers in various foreign countries as for the most part they were generally inefficient and the speaker stated they usually hung around their office from about ten in the morning until one o'clock in the afternoon."

Incidentally I might say that his statement corresponds to my own experience while in Europe and Africa, at which time I called upon several American consuls with the hope and belief that they would extend service and have at their command practical information that should be available for an American manufacturer.

"In every instance I found that the office was apparently filled by some one who had no practical experience in business and the speaker stated that holding down his job in a foreign country at the expense of the government and including the misrepresentation of those he is supposed to represent."

Alive to World Markets.
"Much good is evinced from the discussion as it opened the eyes of the world that had attractive markets for Wisconsin products. Every representative present seemed to be very anxious to obtain the latest information as to the conditions of the world market."

The speaker also pointed out the fact that the South American countries do not enjoy prosperity at this time; that they are seeking to sell their own products rather than to buy foreign goods. French and English bankers have shut down on credits, and the South American countries are looking to the United States for financial aid, it was said.

It was pointed out, however, that the needed goods supplied by European countries must in the immediate future be supplied by the United States and if the manufacturers of Wisconsin will exert themselves they will permanently much of the trade now secured as the result of an exceptional condition.

The idea that manufacturers secured double the regular price for their goods was dispelled by those present.

One of the speakers held that Wisconsin's foreign market is not so good as it is generally supposed to be. He pointed out that the country would soon be swamped with American advertising matter, catalogues and selling agents, and Africa and Asia would afford a more promising market, and that Wisconsin manufacturers should approach the subject with the idea of a world market, he said.

Appoint Executive Committee.
An executive committee was appointed consisting of Frank G. Bolles, chairman; T. R. Brice, Karl Pabst, Edward Freschi, Richard Koebner of Milwaukee; H. J. Sanders, Oshkosh; C. H. Kahle, Janesville; J. J. Delavan, George S. Parker, Janesville, and George B. Massey, South Milwaukee.

It was recommended that $5,000 be raised for compiling facts and data for the Wisconsin Manufacturers' trade extension committee. Wisconsin made products in foreign countries.

Among the speakers were C. D. Saridalis, Frank P. Mumentfeld, A. N. Ritz, Frank G. Bolles, Phoenix, Karl Pabst, Oscar Schmidt, B. W. Freger, George S. Parker, T. R. Brice, W. H. Schwab and H. J. Sanders.

YOUNG MAN MISSING; CANOE ALSO IS GONE

Police Think That Youth Planned
Clever Scheme to Steal Craft
From Local Boat Livery.

Either a young man has stolen a fifty dollar canoe from the Healy brothers who operate a boat livery at the foot of Fourth avenue bridge, or the youth that hired the canoe has met his death by drowning in Rock river. Since nine o'clock Monday morning no trace has been found of the boat or man although the police have investigated in cities along Rock river and Dan Healy yesterday made a trip down the stream to Beloit without results.

On Monday morning about eight o'clock a well-dressed youth came to the electric light plant and inquired for the owners of the canoes at the boat dock. He explained he had friends camping down the river about four miles and wished to hire a canoe to visit their camp. He was directed to the home of the Healy brothers and departed. Later he explained to Dan Healy he wished to hire a canoe to go down the river to inspect the sealing of carp near Afton, explaining he was a game officer sent from Madison for the work. He did not give his name but stated he would return early in the afternoon of the same day.

He was given the best canoe at the dock and was helped in taking the craft around the dam to the river below the electric light plant. This is the place that has been seen of him. The police express an opinion that the canoe has been stolen as their investigation fails to show evidence that the stranger met with an accident between Beloit and Beloit. The story of being a fish inspector is false for there is no seining carp at the present time in Rock river between here and Janesville.

Yesterday afternoon Chief Chapman phoned to the employed at the electric light plant at Beloit, who reported that the canoe passed through Beloit to their knowledge.

It is believed that the canoe had been taken down the river below the city limits and carried off to a hiding place.

AUTOMOBILES CATCH FIRE; FALSE ALARM

Machine of Charles Heon Badly Damaged by Flames at South Janesville—Department Has Three Calls.

The Janesville fire department answered three alarms between eleven o'clock last night and nine o'clock this morning, two alarms being from automobiles catching fire. The second call proved to be a false alarm.

The first alarm, which came from a car owned by Charles Heon, backfired, igniting the overflow of gasoline, causing the oil to distribute the flame over the motor and setting waste oil on fire. The machine was stalled on the Kellogg road near Janesville. Heon ran to the fire department.

Fireman Charles Schultz made a quick trip to the scene. In the "scout" combination car and the big truck was alerted. By the use of a chemical extinguisher the fire was able to extinguish the blaze before the entire body of the auto had been consumed. The motor was badly damaged and the fore part of the machine charred.

Over a dozen people were standing around the corner at the intersection of Main and Milwaukee streets. Shortly before seven o'clock this morning in plain sight of box number 241, yet no one seen a false alarm sent out. Even when standing within twenty feet of the box was unable to give the firemen any information of who pulled the alarm.

The third call was about nine o'clock from the residence of Mrs. Stanley Smith, a large touring car catching fire. No damage was caused, the fire being put out before the department arrived. The motor truck owned by Mrs. Smith was standing in the deep sand below the hill on South Garfield street. The truck was pulled out by the other department automobile.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl twenty years old and have been keeping company with a young man of the same age for about three years. He is poor and has to work and my parents consider him beneath us socially. When I first started to go with him I did not mean it seriously, but only went with him for fun. Now, although he doesn't come up to the standard of my ideal, as he is very homely and has but little education, he is a boy of sterling character and loves me devotedly.

Close association has had its effect and I know I can never love another as I do this boy. My parents cannot reconcile themselves to the match and if I marry him they will never forgive me. I shall have to give up my family and friends, as he cannot support me in the style to which I have been accustomed. I fear I will not be happy. I can see naught but unhappiness. Do you consider it wise to marry him?

DISTRACTED.
I'm afraid you don't love this young man. If you did you would look for a way joyfully to spending your life with him. Don't make him any promises until there is no longer any question in your heart as to whether you will be happy with him. You are still young and can wait a year or two before deciding whom you will marry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have a white cotton voile dress and have some ink spots on it. I soaked it in sour milk over night, but that didn't take them out. Can you give me a remedy?

(2) I washed a white ribbon sash in gasoline and it turned yellow. How can I whiten the sash? READER.

(1) Wet the stain with oxalic acid, hold over steam, wash with ammonia first, then with soap and water. Ink eradicator is also good.

(2) I know of nothing that will help the sash now that it is yellow. You might dye it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Can you give me the recipe for crystallizing grasses with alum?

(2) How should asparagus and Boston ferns be cared for?

"FOREFUL."

(1) A saturated solution of alum is made by pouring boiling water over alum until it will dissolve. The alum is then placed in vases with as much of the alum water on them as possible. The water evaporates and leaves the alum crystals on the grasses.

(2) Ferns need some sun light, but not hot sun. If they are sickly, put a tablespoonful of castor oil about the roots. Notice if there is any sign of scale on the under side of the leaves. These should be picked off if they appear and the leaves washed with strong suds. When ferns become rot-bound they should be transplanted to a larger pot or the roots divided. Never let the ferns under the flower not have water in it, the ferns will rot.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am keeping company with a young man. The man I kept company with before told me something about my friend and said I could tell him, but not to say who told me. My friend knows who told me and he is very angry at me. Did I do right by telling him?

WORRIED.
Obviously the man was meddling with the intent of making trouble. I would advise you never to repeat things when the person who told you is not willing to have his name used. It usually leads to trouble.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: If a man comes to this country when seventeen and has taken out no papers, is he a citizen of the U. S. when he is fifty?

Y. SCHEISS.
Not unless the young man's father took out naturalization papers for complete citizenship before the boy was of age. A naturalized citizen's minor children do not need to take out papers.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Is it any harm for a girl of twelve years to use a little bit of slang?

WORRY.
I think it would be better, dearie, if you avoided the use of slang. The most cultured women never use it, and you want to grow up to be as good as the best, don't you?

NUTS IN VARIOUS WAYS.

All food authorities claim for nuts a high food value. They are rich in protein and fat but it must be remembered that they are also a very concentrated food, which if too freely used will cause digestive disturbances. Used with fruit, bread, crackers and vegetables, which are largely cellulose, they are most easily digested. A formal luncheon or dinner is incomplete without salted almonds and a lunch basket is not properly furnished without a handful of nuts of some kind to add variety as well as food value.

A few blanched almonds added to potato salad give it a most festive air.

Brazilian Salad.—This makes a most refreshing dinner salad. Remove the skin and seeds from white grapes and cut in halves lengthwise. Add an equal quantity of shredded fresh pineapple, apples cut in dice, and celery cut in small pieces, allowed to stand in ice-water to become firm and crisp. Then drain and dry well on cheese-cloth. Add a fourth of the quantity of Brazil nuts which have been carefully peeled of the brown skin and cut in even slices. Mix well and add mayonnaise dressing. Serve in nests of lettuce leaves.

Benares Salad.—Use fresh grated coconut, one cupful, two cupfuls of diced apple, a teaspoonful of grated onion, one chopped red pepper and one of green, mixed well with French dressing and serve in apple cups. If fresh peppers and coconut are not obtainable use the dry coconut well washed in milk to remove the sugar and soften it; for green, chopped parsley may be substituted for the pepper and canned red pepper may be used for the fresh, although it is not nearly as pretty.

A nut omelet is so well liked that it is well to store it for use. Put a handful of blanched almonds in the pan with the butter and pour the omelet in at once; when it is folded the almonds will be well browned. Serve with a hot maple or caramel sauce. This is a delicious dessert.

The Awakening of Peggy

Reflection on the First and Second Choices of Young Ladies Like Peggy.

Young Mr. Burbank, known to everybody as "Bill," was to take Peggy to a club dancing party. It is said on very good authority that when a girl approaches marriage, she never meets a new young man without estimating his value as a matrimonial proposition. The young men of longer acquaintance are of course classified and mentally indexed according to their desirability. Peggy had been giving Bill Burbank some thought, but the results didn't quite satisfy her. Bill was cheerful and honest, and meant to do his part. He had a fairly good position, and gave promise of attaining a fair degree of success. His habits were correct, and he was not given to wildness. In short, he embodied the qualities that conservative parents hope to see in their sons-in-law.

But to Peggy, Bill seemed lacking in some elusive particular. While he was a pleasant companion, he seemed to Peggy to lack the vital spark of a magnetic personality. He was agreeable, but not dynamic. Have you ever eaten a baked potato without salt? Then you follow.

To particulars still further Bill was the sort of fellow that every girl tries to hold in reserve on her staff, with a half-formed idea that she may eventually marry him if she cannot pick someone who measures up to plans and specifications of her working ideal. For the young man of Bill's type is likely to be steady puller in a double harness, amiable, tolerant, industrious and a cheerful payer of wife's bills. He is far, far better than no husband at all.

Mrs. Gray liked Bill, and was disposed to favor him. She felt that if entrusted with Peggy, he would take good care of her little girl.

Peggy pondered these things as she made ready to go to the party, stealing an occasional glance at a kodak picture on her dresser in which she and Bill figured. Much rather would she have had Parker Condrey's company on this occasion, but Patty

Smith, alas! seemed determined to keep Mr. Condrey to herself. Such are the times when the good old Bill comes in handy. When the fascinating and greatly desired young man be stows his attentions elsewhere, plain Bill is accepted with a warmth that sends his hopes bounding upward.

Tardy Act of Justice.
Marriage between English actresses and men of a high social position began in the eighteenth century. If no earlier. There was Lavinia Fenton, the Polly Peachum of Gay's "Beggar's Opera," who became Duchess of Bolton; there was Miss Farren, who married Lord Derby; also Miss Brunton became Lady Crayen not long before Lord Thurlow married Miss Bolton. Earliest of the list, though, comes the earl of Peterborough, who married Anastasia Robinson, the singer, and kept the marriage a secret until a few days before his death in St. James' palace, when he assembled his relatives and friends and publicly acknowledged the woman "to whom he owed the best and happiest hours of his life," a tardy act of justice that caused the lady to swoon away.

Very Dangerous.
Friend—"Why, Elvira, what's the matter?" Elvira—"Oh, I don't know, only I'm worried to death! I've had the same girl six weeks and she doesn't talk about leaving yet!" Friend—"She doesn't?" Elvira—"Not a word! She must be in love with my husband!"

National Geographic Society War Primer

Montfaucon.—A town of northern France, 13 miles northwest of Verdun, half way between the valleys of the Meuse and Aisne, 23 miles from the Belgian border and but a few miles east of the Argonne Forest. It was here that the body of Admiral Coligny, "the noblest victim" of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, was hung up by the heels on the gibbet. The body was secretly taken from here to be buried in the parish church, without the head, which was conveyed to Catherine de Medici. The admiral had incurred the wrath of Catherine by endeavoring to draw the king, Charles IX, into war with Spain. Her attempt to have him assassinated infuriated the Huguenots, and Catherine conceived the idea of killing their leaders and ruining the Protestant party. It is estimated 50,000 men were massacred in the whole of France.

Clermont-De-Loise.—A town of northern France, with about 7,000 population, 18 miles west of Compiègne, on the Breche, a tributary to the Oise. Its ancient castle is now used as a prison for women. In the middle ages, so the legend goes, two Irish girls, Maury and Bridget, suffered martyrdom nearby, and were buried in the cemetery of Nogent, in Clermont. Toward the end of the twelfth century a peasant lots a black cow that passed the night lying on the tomb of the virgins. When the cow was found one side had turned white. Sometime later the cow again slept on the tomb and its other side was turned white.

St. Riquier.—A town of northern France, 32 miles west of Amiens, whose women, in 1536, aided valiantly in repelling a determined attack by the troops of Charles V. One heroine, named Bequetotille, is said to have captured a hostile flag with her own hands. The town never recovered from its frequent destruction by the Normans, Burgundians, Germans and English. St. Riquier was famous in its early days for its abbey, founded about 625.

Trent.—The capital of the Italian-speaking portion of the Austrian province of Tyrol, ten miles from the Italian border, at the junction of the Adige and Fersina rivers. Its embattled walls and towers fill the whole breadth of the valley. Its inhabitants, about 27,000 in number, including a garrison of over 2,000, speak Italian only. The city lives rather on its historical souvenirs than on its industries. In 774 Trent became a part of Italy, but was transferred to Germany in 1027. It passed to Austria in 1814 and was formally annexed in 1814.

Trieste.—The principal seaport of Austria on the Gulf of Venice, 30 miles southwest of Vienna by rail. It may be said nearly to monopolize the trade of the Adriatic, and has eclipsed its ancient rival, Venice, which lies scarcely more than 70 miles across the gulf. It had a population of 223,475 in 1910. Trieste was the center of a large emigration from Austria to America by the inauguration of a direct emigrant service from New York in 1904. The town was captured by Venice in 1203. The port was blockaded by an Italian fleet from May until August, 1848. At the head of its industrial establishments are two shipbuilding yards, the most important of their kind in Austria, employing more than 5,000 workmen. It also has petroleum refineries, iron and chemical, soap, silk spinning and machine factories.

OUT IN THE COLD.

So many people suffer from weak, inactive sluggish kidneys, and don't know what ails them. All tired out and miserable—run down and nervous—sleep poorly and no appetite—pain in back and sides—swollen ankles and joints—bladder weakness—that's kidney trouble. You need the medicine that stops the cause of your trouble.

That's exactly what FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS do. They are tonic and strengthening, build up your kidneys, reduce swellings, make you feel fit, active and energetic again. They are a wonder to those using them. Try them yourself. Contain no habit forming drugs. Do not accept a substitute.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
If a knife is placed under a tumbler or glass dish, boiling milk water can be put in without breaking the glass.

When boiling eggs, wet the shells thoroughly in cold water before dropping them into the boiling water, and they will not crack.

Grease the bottom of the pots and kettles before putting them over the coals, and they will not become black.

Paint the inside of iron pots and pans with white enamel if you would have them fresh and easy to keep clean.

THE TABLE.

German Herring Salad.—Cook a salted herring in boiling water for fully fifteen minutes. Cool and separate the flakes. Add an equal quantity of small, cold boiled potato cubes and one-fourth the quantity of chopped hard-boiled eggs. Marinate with French dressing. Cover and allow it to stand in a cold place for an hour. Then beat one-third cup heavy cream until stiff, and two tablespoons pimento put through a fine food chopper. Then add an equal quantity of mayonnaise dressing. Mix in this dressing well and arrange salad on bed of crisp lettuce leaves. This is a very good-tasting salad and lowers of eggs.

Rummage Pickles.—Chop and mix two quarts green tomatoes, one quart ripe tomatoes, three bunches celery, three large onions, three large red peppers, three green peppers, small head of cabbage and one or two large ripe cucumbers. Sprinkle cup of salt over mixture and let stand over night. In the morning drain well and add three pints vinegar, quart brown sugar, teaspoon mustard and teaspoon black pepper. Cook mixture until clear—usually takes an hour to an hour and a half. While the pickles are still hot, seal in jars. This is fine.

Grape Jelly.—Stem grapes that are a little unripe or, if ripe, add a few green ones, cook but use no water, as the more water you put in the more you will have to cook out, and cooking spoils color and flavor. Cook fruit until soft, then crush through jelly bag. Allow same amount of sugar as juice. Boil juice twenty minutes. Meantime have sugar heating in oven. When the time limit is up, put sugar into juice (do not let it remain over fire more than three minutes); strain jelly into glasses.

Piccalilli.—Chop together a peck of green tomatoes one head cabbage, eight large onions and three red and three green peppers. Add one cup salt and let mixture stand over night. In the morning drain off liquid, add two quarts of vinegar, one pound brown sugar, one-fourth pound mustard seed, two tablespoons cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon cayenne pepper and a bag containing tablespoon of

NO REASON FOR IT

When Janesville Citizens Show a Way.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the words of a neighbor who has found relief. Read what a Janesville citizen says:

Mrs. Eliza Johnson, 118 N. Terrace St., Janesville, says: "I was a sufferer from kidney trouble and rheumatic pains for ten or twelve years. My kidneys seemed to get clogged and didn't filter the poison from my system. I got weak and almost helpless at times. My joints swelled and were very sore. It seemed that I could get nothing that would relieve me. Finally, I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a supply from the People's Drug Co. I was soon feeling better and my kidneys gradually got stronger. All I said about Doan's Kidney Pills when I recommended them two years ago, holds good. I have just as much confidence in them now as I did then."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Johnson had. Foster-McIlburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

CHAPTER VII.

Making a War.

Hedworth Westerling would have said twenty to one if he had been asked the odds against war when he was putting from Maria Gailand in the hotel reception room. Before he reached home he would have changed them to ten to one. A scare bulletin about the Bodapoo affair compelling attention as his car halted to let the traffic of a cross street pass, he bought a newspaper thrust in at the car window that contained the answer of the government of the Browns to a dispatch that had arisen in the distant African jungle. This he had already read two days previously, by courtesy of the premier. It was moderate in tone, as became a power that had 3,000,000 soldiers against its opponent's 5,000,000; nevertheless, it firmly pointed out that the territory of the Browns had been overtaken, on the pretext of securing a deserter who had escaped across the line, by Gray colonial troops who had raised the Gray flag in place of the Brown flag and remained defiantly in occupation of the outpost they had taken.

As yet, the Browns had not attempted to repel the aggressor by arms for fear of complications, but were relying on the Gray government to order a withdrawal of the Gray force and the repudiation of a commander who had been guilty of so grave an international affront. The surprising and illuminating thing to Westerling was the inspired statement to the press from the Gray foreign office, adroitly appealing to Gray chauvinism and justifying the "intrepidity" of the Gray commander in response to so-called "pin-pricking" exasperations.

At the door of his apartment, Francois, his valet and factotum, gave Westerling a letter.

"Important, sir," said Francois.

Westerling knew by a glance that it was for it was addressed and marked "Personal" in the premier's own handwriting. A conference for ten that evening was requested in a manner that left no doubt of its urgency.

Curiosity made him a little ahead of time, but he found the premier awaiting him in his study, free from interruption or eavesdropping.

In the shadow of the table lamp the old premier looked his years. From youth he had been in politics, ever a bold figure and a daring player, but now beginning to feel the pressure of younger men's elbows. Fonder even of power, which had become a habit, than in his twenties, he saw it slipping from his grasp at an age when the downfall of his government meant that he should never hold the reins again. He had been called an ambitious demagogue and a makeshift opportunist by his enemies, but the crowd liked him for his ready strategy, his genius for appealing phrases, and for the gambler's virtue which hitherto had made him a good loser.

"You saw our communique tonight that went with the publication of the Browns' dispatch?" he remarked.

"Yes, and I am glad that I had been careful to send a spirited commander to that region," Westerling replied.

"So you guess my intention, I see?" the premier smiled. He picked up a long, thin ivory paper-knife and softly tapped the palm of his hand with it.

"Certainly!" Westerling replied in his ready, confident manner.

"We hear a great deal about the precision and power of modern arms as favoring the defensive," said the premier. "I have read somewhere that it will enable the Browns to hold us back, despite our advantage of numbers. Also, that they can completely man every part of their frontier and their ability to move their reserves rapidly, thanks to modern facilities. Makes a powerful flanking attack in surprise out of the question."

Some half-truths in that, answered Westerling. "One axiom, that must hold good through all time, is that the aggressive which keeps at it always wins. We take the aggressive. In the space where Napoleon deployed a division, we deploy a battalion today. The precision and power of modern arms require this. With such immense forces and present-day tactics, the line of battle will practically cover the length of the frontier. Along their range the Browns have a series of fortresses commanding natural openings for our attack. These are almost impregnable. But there are pregnable points between them. Here, our method will be the same that the Japanese followed and that they learned from European armies. We shall concentrate in masses and throw in wave after wave of attack until we have gained the positions we desire. Once we have a tenable foothold on the crest of the range the Brown army must fall back and the rest will be a matter of skillful pursuit."

The premier, as he listened, rolled the paper knife over and over, regarding its polished sides, which were like Westerling's manner of facile statement of a program certain of fulfillment.

"How long will it take to mobilize?"

"Less than a week after the railroads are put entirely at our service, with three preceding days of scattered movements," answered Westerling. "Deliberate mobilizations are all right for a diplomatic threat that creates a furore in the newspapers and a depression in the stock market, but which is not to be carried out. When you mean war, all speed and the war fever at white heat."

"You would have made a good politician," Westerling, the premier remarked, with a twinging uplift of the brows and a knowing gleam in his shrewd old eyes.

"Thank you," replied Westerling. "A man who is able to lead in anything must be something of a politician."

"Very true, indeed. Perhaps I had that partly in mind in making you vice-chief of staff," responded the premier.

"Then it all goes back to the public—to that enormous body of humanity out there!" He swung the paper knife around with outstretched arm toward the walls of the room. "To public opinion—as does everything else in this age—to the people—our masters, your and mine! For no man can stand against them when they say no or yes."

"You know the keys to play on, though," remarked Westerling with a complimentary smile. "No one knows quite so well."

"And you are sure—sure we can win?" the premier asked with a long, tense look at Westerling, who was steady under the scrutiny.

"Absolutely!" he answered. "Five millions against three! It's mathematics, or our courage and skill are thus the army is made of all intelligence, all communication, all resources. Everything we require goes into the crucible."

"And the press—the mischievous, greedy, but very useful press?" asked the premier.

"It also shall serve; also obey. No lists of killed and wounded shall be given out until I am ready. The public must know nothing except what I choose to tell. I act for the people and the nation."

"That is agreed," said the premier. "For these terrible weeks every nerve and muscle of the nation is at your service to win for the nation. In three or four days I shall know if the public rises to the call. If not—" He shook his head.

"While all the information given out is provocative to our people, you will declare your hope that war may be averted," Westerling continued. "This will screen our purpose. Finally, on top of public enthusiasm will come the word that the Browns have fired the first shot—as they must when we cross the frontier—that they have been killing our soldiers. This will make the racial spirit of every man respond. Having decided for war, every plan is worthy that helps to victory."

"It seems fiendish!" exclaimed the premier in answer to a thought edging in the powerful current of his brain. "Fiendish with calculation, but merciful, as you say."

"A fast, terrific campaign! A ready machine taking the road!" Westerling declared. "Less suffering than if we went to war carelessly for a long campaign—than if we allowed sentiment to interfere with intellect."

"I like your energy, your will!" said the premier admiringly. "And about the declaration of war? We shall time that to your purpose."

"Declarations of war before striking, by nations taking the aggressive, are a disadvantage," Westerling explained. "They are going out of practice. Witness the examples of Japan against Russia and the Balkan allies against Turkey. In these days declarations are not necessary as a warning of what is going to happen. They belong to the etiquette of fencers."

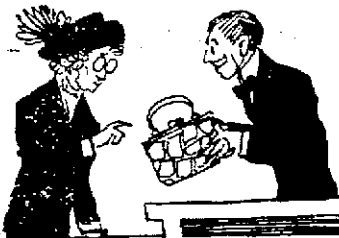

"Yes, exactly. The declaration of war and the ambassador's passports will be prepared and the wire that fighting has begun will release them," agreed the premier.

"Yet if we did lose! If when I had given you all our plans went wrong! If our army were broken to pieces on the frontier and then the nation, kept in ignorance of events, learned the truth—the premier enunciated slowly and pointedly while he looked glances with Westerling—"that is the end for us both. You would hardly want to return to the capital to face public wrath!"

"We must win though we lose a million men!" he answered. "I stake my life!" he cried hoarsely, striking his fist on the table.

Dinner Stories

The hard-working fancy dealer had vainly ransacked the whole of his shop in his efforts to please an old lady who wanted to purchase a present for her granddaughter. For the fifteenth time she picked up and critically examined a neat little sachet.

"Are you quite sure that this is a genuine alligator skin?" she inquired.

"Positive, madam," quoth the dealer. "I shot the alligator myself. It looks rather soiled," said the lady.

"That, madam, is where it struck the ground when it fell off the tree."

Sir Donald Mann has no time to spare as a reporter, who went to see him, found him in a state of great excitement. There was some talk of a line to run north from Toronto to a junction with the Grand Trunk at North Bay. After Sir Donald had been talking for some little time the reporter said, "By the way, Sir Donald, where is North Bay?" Sir Donald looked at the newspaper man. Then he looked toward the door. "I'm not here to teach reporters geography," he said.

It was a soiree musical. A singer had just finished "My Old Kentucky Home." The hostess, seeing one of her guests weeping in a remote corner, went to him and inquired in a sympathetic voice: "Are you a Kentuckian?" And the answer quickly came: "No, madame, I am a musician."

And then again for an instant something like the faintest shadow of decision gleamed out of the envoy's eyes and recalled that chilly feeling to King Ferdinand's spine.

Some kindred depression had come to Pestovitch, who had been watching the drawn intensity of Firmin's face. He came to the help of his master, who, he feared, might protest too much.

"A search!" cried the king. "An embargo on our aeroplanes!"

"Only as a temporary expedient," said the ex-king, Egbert, "while the search is going on."

The king appealed to his council. "The people will never permit it, sire," said a bustling little man in a gorgeous uniform.

"You'll have to make 'em," said the ex-king, gently addressing all the councilors.

King Ferdinand glanced at the closed brass door through which no news would come.

"When would you want to have this search?"

The ex-king was radiant. "We couldn't possibly do it until the day after tomorrow," he said.

"But the capital?"

"Where else?" asked the ex-king still more cheerfully.

"For my own part," said the ex-king confidentially, "I think the whole business ridiculous. Who would be such a fool as to hide atomic bombs? Nobody. Certain hanging if he's caught; certain and almost certain blowing up if he isn't. But nowadays I have to take orders like the rest of the world. And here I am."

The king thought he had never met such detestable gentility. He glanced at Pestovitch, who nodded almost imperceptibly. It was well, anyhow, to have a fool to deal with. They might have sent a diplomatist. "Of course," said the king, "I recognize the overpowering force—and a kind of logic—in these orders from Bratislava."

"I knew you would," said the ex-king, with an air of relief, "and so let us arrange—"

They arranged with a certain informality. No Balkan aeroplane was to adventure into the air until the search was concluded, and meanwhile the fleets of the world government would soar and circle in the sky. The towns were to be placarded with offers of reward to any one who would help in the discovery of atomic bombs.

"You will sign that," said the ex-king.

"Why?"

"To show that we aren't in any way hostile to you."

Pestovitch nodded "Yes" to his master.

"And then you see," said the ex-king in that easy way of his, "we'll have a lot of men here, borrow help from your police and run through all your things, and then everything will be over. Meanwhile if I may be your guest—"

When presently Pestovitch was alone with the king again he found him in a state of angling emotions. His spirit was tossing like a wind-whipped sea. One moment he was exalted and full of contempt for "that ass" and his search; the next he was down in a pit of dread. "They will find them, Pestovitch, and then he'll hang us."

"Hang us?"

The king put his long nose into his counselor's face. "That grinning brute wants to hang us," he said. "And hang us he will if we give him a shadow of a chance."

"But all their modern state civilization!"

"Do you think there's any pity in that crew of Godless, vivisection-prigs?" cried this last king of romance. "Do you think, Pestovitch, they understand anything of a high ambition or a splendid dream? Do you think that our gallant and sublime adventure has any appeal to them? Here am I, the last and greatest, and most romantic of the Caesars, and do you think they will miss the chance of hanging me like a dog if they can, killing me like a rat in a hole? And that renegade! He who was once an anointed king!"

"I hate that sort of eye that laughs and keeps hard," said the king.

"I won't sit still here and be caught like a fascinated rabbit," said the king in conclusion. "We must shift those bombs."

"Risk it," said Pestovitch. "Leave them alone."

"No," said the king. "Shift them near the frontier. Then while they watch us here—they will always watch us here now—we can buy an aeroplane abroad and pick them up."

CHAPTER XI.

The Last Rebel King.

THE king was in a feverish, irritable mood all that evening, but he made his plans nevertheless with infinite cunning.

They must get the bombs away. There must be a couple of atomic bay lorries: the bombs could be hidden under the bay. Pestovitch went and came, instructing trusty servants, planning and replanning. The king and the ex-king dined together, and the ex-king talked very pleasantly of a number of subjects. All the while at the back of King Ferdinand Charles' mind fretted the mystery of his vanished aeroplane.

There came no news of its capture and no news of its success. At any moment all that power at the back of his visitor might crumble away and vanish.

It was past midnight when the king in a cloak and slouch hat that might equally have served a small farmer or any respectable middle class man, slipped out from an inconspicuous service gate on the eastward side of his palace into the thickly wooded gardens that sloped in a series of terraces down to the town. Pestovitch and his guard-valet Peter, both wrapped about in a similar disguise, came out among the laurels that bordered the pathway and joined him. It was a clear, warm night, but the stars seemed unusually little and remote because of the aeroplanes, each trailing a searchlight, that drove hither and thither across the blue. One great beam had seemed to rest on the king for a moment as he came out of the palace, then instantly and reassuringly it had swept away. But while they were still in the palace gardens another found them and looked at them.

"They see us," cried the king.

"They make nothing of us," said Pestovitch.

The king glanced up and met a calm cold eye of light that seemed to wink at him and vanish, leaving him blinded.

The three men went on their way. Near the little gate in the garden railings that Pestovitch had caused to be unlocked, the king paused under the shadow of an elm and looked back at the palace. It was very high and narrow, a twentieth century rendering of mediævalism, mediævalism in steel and bronze and sham stone and opaque glass. Against the sky it splashed a confusion of panaches. High up in the eastward wing were the windows of the apartments of the ex-king Egbert. One of them was brightly lit now, and against the light a little black figure stood very still and looked out upon the night.

The king smiled.

"He little knows how we slip through his fingers," said Pestovitch.

And as he spoke, they saw the ex-king stretch out his arms slowly like one who yawns, knuckle his eyes and turn inward—no doubt to his bed.

Down through the ancient winding back streets of his capital hurried the king, and at an appointed corner a shabby atom automobile waited for the three. It was a hackney carriage of the lowest grade, with dented metal panels and deflated cushions. The driver was one of the ordinary drivers of the capital, but beside him sat the young secretary of Pestovitch, who knew the way to the farm where the bombs were hidden.

The automobile made its way through the narrow streets of the old town, which were still lit and uneasy—for the fleet of aeroplanes overhead had kept the cafes open and people abroad—over the great new bridge, and so by straggling outskirts to the country. And all through his capital the king, who hoped to outdo Caesar, sat back and was very still, and no one spoke.

And as they got out into the dark country they became aware of the searchlights wandering over the countryside like the uneasy ghosts of giants. The king sat forward and looked at these flitting whitehearts, and every now and then peered up to see the flying ships overhead.

"I don't like them," said the king.

Presently one of these patches of moonlight came to rest about them and seemed to be following their automobile. The king drew back.

NEW GLARUS PEOPLE PLAN CELEBRATION OF FOUNDING TOWN

Swiss Citizens to Celebrate Seventieth Anniversary of Moving Village to Wisconsin From Switzerland.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., September 23.—All the people of the foothills of New Glarus, a town that was virtually the Alps, and the first Swiss village to be located in Wisconsin, today are preparing to celebrate its seventieth anniversary. Descendants of the little band of pioneers that fought poverty and privation to make a home in the new world, some of whom are among the state's most foremost citizens are arranging for the observance. New Glarus owes its being to a public meeting held in 1844 in the village of Schwanden in the Canton of Glarus, Switzerland. It had been a year of crop failures and industrial stagnation and the villagers saw more lean years ahead. They decided to send a select group to investigate the stories of prosperity in America and raised a fund of $4,000 to pay the expenses of the scouts and enable them to purchase lands. On March 18, 1845, the two pioneers embarked in a small sailing packet from Havre for New York. On May 6 they reached their destination but after making their way by rail, steamer and stage to Chicago, they found that all the desirable timber land in Ohio, Illinois and Indiana had been sold and only prairie land remained for settlement. Like other European emigrants, they did not recognize the advantage of the fertile prairie lands, but continued on their search for a country like that of their fatherland. Up and down Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Wisconsin they wandered until on June 23 they arrived, weary and discouraged, in the northern hills of Green county, Wisconsin. Here they found just such lands as they had hoped for, and on July 7 they bought 1,200 acres with their own money and commenced building the rude huts that were to house the inhabitants of New Glarus. The original plans called for the departure of the colonists from Switzerland in 1846, but the fever for emigration became uncontrollable and on April 16, 1845, a band of 193 persons of all ages clambered aboard an open boat and moved down the Rhine, transshipping at Basel and across the English Channel to America. In the forty-nine days required for passage two of the party died, but on June 30 the others arrived at Baltimore. From Baltimore to St. Louis the trip was made by way of the Pennsylvania canal and north to Wisconsin on the Mississippi. The entire party arrived at New Glarus on Aug. 15, 1845, and began erecting their homes. Their settlement became the center of a prosperous dairy industry and to this day visitors to New Glarus may still see many of the quaint old Swiss customs and there heard the dialect of the pioneers who made the journey to Wisconsin almost three-quarters of a century ago.

WHEN SKIN BREAKS OUT OR ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR SAYS AN OUNCE OF BOLD-SULPHUR CREAM WILL DRY ANY ECZEMA ERUPTION RIGHT UP

Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth. He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to the irritated parts the same as you would any cold cream. For many years common bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the practice of dermatology and cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also anti-pruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always effecting a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subdue the angry itching and irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin. This is published for Walter Luther, Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

CLAIMS DECISION LAW HURTS BOXING GAME

Ad Volcast Will Take Another Rest Before Entering Ring Again—News From the Roped Arena.

By Strikes.

With the advance of the boxing season, fans, boxers and promoters are asking for the legal decision in boxing matches on the claim that under the present state law a bout is not really a contest. In a sporting sense some one has to win in every contest whether a running match, horse race of pugilistic exhibition, and it is claimed the state no-decision law has hurt the game to some extent.

One of the reasons advanced is that boxers have no impetus to perform in their best style when a decision by the referee is not allowed, and, knowing this, they tend to rather stall along attempting to escape punishment and gaining the good graces of the paper scribes by fancy sparring. On the other hand, if a decision was given boxers would be more careful in their work in the ring, knowing that marks are going down in their record. Now every boxer will present a list two yards or more long of men he has met, all marked as decisions, but claiming an edge on the bout, and if some scribe has given him a shade on the bout so much the better. The one advantage of the no-decision law, however, which tends to offset the arguments, is that it eliminates gambling to a great extent, which makes possible gambling under state supervision.

Ad Volcast, who has gone up the boxing world and has now started down, is determined to have another try in his comeback campaign, even after his trimming by Joe Mandot, the New Orleans lightweight, in Milwaukee recently. Considering that the Michigan bearcat has not been active to any great extent for a long period and that his troublesome hands and arm are just healing, this defeat may not signify that Volcast is through. The former champ is as confident as ever and would like to take another whirl at the stars after a rest on his Michigan farm.

Kid Williams, the new bantam champion, recently fought his first battle since he dethroned Johnny Coulton, whipping a clever feather with a moricle of "Louisiana" at Philadelphia. The new champ was the aggressor and pounded his rival all through the route. Ritchie Mitchell, the Milwaukee feather, meets Benny Chavez of Denver for ten rounds on Sept. 23 at Milwaukee. This pair met in Denver recently and Mitchell was credited with a shade over the Denver feather. Mitchell lost his bout with Fatsy Kline in New York and will probably feature in Milwaukee exhibitions during the season.

Young Scotty, the Jones Island champ, is on Mitchell's trail for a meeting, and Scotty would like nothing better than to meet the Milwaukee pride.

There is no doubt but what Mitchell is by far the better boxer of the two, but Scotty expresses confidence that he could make Mitchell travel a merry pace. Mitchell and Kid Mahoney went eight rounds to a draw last year, and Scotty was entitled to a shade over Mahoney in their bout here. It is doubtful if Mitchell has punch enough to phase the Jones Island iron man, for Scotty appears to thrive on punishment.

Negotiations are being made to match Scotty with a fast feather at the next Beloit exhibition, and if the bout is scheduled local fans will watch the outcome with live interest. Col. Naughton, the Beloit matcher, at first wanted Scotty to meet Ward for eight rounds, but this bout would have been a joke. Scotty whipped Ward in five rounds at their last meeting, and while Ward is a "comer" he is no match for the sturdy Scotty.

A voracious appetite cost Johnny Dundee a fortune and the title of the featherweight division. Kibane, the champ, and Dundee were matched to fight twenty rounds for the title, and Dundee was a sure bet winner and had the title within sight. The scales stopped the bout for they clearly showed that Dundee could never make the 122 pound weight limit, and the match was called off. In other words, Dundee ate himself out of title and fortune.

What show Dundee will have against the lightweight is uncertain, as he is essentially a boxer with a light punch, depending on his skill to win a decision. With the added weight recently acquired it is doubtful if Johnny will be able to show his winning speed. To show is class one has only to point to the records showing where the former feather outboxed Freddie Welsh for the greater part of a ten round match, his nimbleness having the Britisher guessing.

Jack Dillon meets Battling Levinsky, the New York truck horse, tonight for ten rounds. Dillon is out on the New Orleans lightweight, in Milwaukee recently. Considering that the Michigan bearcat has not been active to any great extent for a long period and that his troublesome hands and arm are just healing, this defeat may not signify that Volcast is through. The former champ is as confident as ever and would like to take another whirl at the stars after a rest on his Michigan farm.

Kid Williams, the new bantam champion, recently fought his first battle since he dethroned Johnny Coulton, whipping a clever feather with a moricle of "Louisiana" at Philadelphia. The new champ was the aggressor and pounded his rival all through the route. Ritchie Mitchell, the Milwaukee feather, meets Benny Chavez of Denver for ten rounds on Sept. 23 at Milwaukee. This pair met in Denver recently and Mitchell was credited with a shade over the Denver feather. Mitchell lost his bout with Fatsy Kline in New York and will probably feature in Milwaukee exhibitions during the season.

EDLER DECIDES TO ENTER WISCONSIN

Former Janesville High School and Beloit College Star Athlete Goes to University.

Beloit college football prospects for the coming season were given a severe setback yesterday, when it was learned that one of their five veterans, Raymond Charles Edler, of Janesville, has decided to quit. Beloit is in favor of Wisconsin university. Edler will go to Madison on Thursday to enter as a sophomore, his freshman work having been completed at Beloit last year. Owing to the conference ruling at Madison, Edler will be forced to remain out of varsity athletics until his junior year. He will then have two years to make good, along with Guyton, a former Carlisle man, and Lamberton, a former Princeton star, who both enter the varsity this fall. He will be placed under the care of the freshman coach, Tom Jones, this season, and by another year should be a master at football, ready to take care of any position that might be given him.

Edler is well-known in this city, having finished four successful years at the Janesville high school, where he was the most prominent football, basketball and baseball athlete. His work at Beloit college, in both football and basketball, was little short of marvelous. He is an all-around athlete, and will be a great help to Wisconsin's chances in various lines of sport for the next three years. His basketball work against Gene Van Gent last winter at Madison, was one of the features of the game.

Edler decided on going to Wisconsin early in the week, when he visited at the capital city.

Sport Snap Shots

Harold Irelan, with the Phillies, filled in at first in a game not long ago and won the rep of being the smallest first baseman in the business. He is 5 feet, 3 inches tall. He covered the bag quite well for a short person though he was obliged to jump for quite a few low throws.

It looks like Nan Rucker has returned only to make it a bit hot for the Giants. He is too late to help the Dodgers much, but he is able to set the Giants back a bit. In a recent game he held them to one run. It seems that his arm is all that it used to be and that next season he will perform in his old time manner.

Charles Doolin of the Phillies has a big German who, he feels sure, will develop into a wonder on the mound. Oeschler is the recruit's name and he is said to be a whale for size, with a great curve and a world of steam. He has done little this summer, but Doolin declares that he will have them all going next year.

Marty Kavanaugh is making a great hit at second for the Tigers. With Owine Bush he makes up a very speedy combination. In many ways they give the Evers-Marsanville duo quite a run.

Brooklyn brass that it has had at least one good crowd at its park this season, which was when the Superbas played the Giants September 5. However, many declare that the most of the spectators came from New York.

Charles Doolin's Phillies may not draw so well at home, but they seem able to set the crowds elsewhere. At any rate in exhibition games, they can. When they played a Sunday game at Atlantic City recently there were more than 12,000 in attendance.

it seem that the Athletics are at a loss for acceptable pitching class.

Yank fans are eager to get Mike Donlin as a manager, replacing Frank Chance. His many friends in Gotham are starting a campaign that may put him on the job and if popularity will win it for him the job is already Mike's. There are several other candidates, however, though no particular one has yet been selected. Connie Mack has recommended Jack Dunn of Baltimore to Parrell, the Yank Owner. He is known to be a wonder in developing young players. He took the providence team from the bottom booth to the top of the league. He has also developed more youngsters into big league stars while at Baltimore than any other minor league chief. Dunn and Donlin look like the strongest bidders for the job at present, but Frank Chance has gone forever.

COACH CURTIS PICKS HIGH SCHOOL SQUAD

Fourteen Athletes Will Play on "Dry" Eleven This Fall—Hard Scrimmage Held Yesterday.

Following the hardest scrimmage of the year yesterday afternoon, Coach Curtis this morning selected his squad for the coming season, composed of fourteen men. All of these men are qualified or will be up by the first of next week. They are: Captain Leslie Stewart, Rau, Cronin, Dearborn, Mooney, Viney, Taylor, More, Schenck, McCulloch, Slawson, Dudley, Jones and Richards.

The squad includes some huskies and some speed men. If kept the same, will comprise one of the fastest set of backs in many years, barring the 1912 set, when Falter and Edler played. Stewart, at quarter back, Rau at full back, and Cronin and Dearborn at halves, play well together, all being fast and possessing some experience. More and Taylor, who will undoubtedly assume the tackle positions, may be shifted to the backfield if needed. This pair of linemen being both speedy. The scrimmage yesterday lasted for three-quarters of an hour. Edler was on the field aiding the backs and instructing them how to best gain ground.

CHENEY DISCOURAGES GIANTS; BEATS MATTY

Cubs Win Last of Series 5 to 0, While Braves Trim Pirates, Winning Seventh Straight.

Cubs, 5; Giants, 0. Cheney beats Mattison. Two hits on Cheney and nine off the "Big Six." It was easy. A massacre of swats and errors in the first round yesterday, gave the West Siders their five markers; and that is all there was to it.

As the result, the Cubs gained on the Giants, while the latter club fell, thus making things easier for the enemy—the Boston Braves, who, by the way, spent a pleasant afternoon on their home grounds, training up the Pirates a bit, winning their seventh straight victory. Tyler was on the mound, and allowed six swats, while his mates secured twice as many. McGraw opposed him. That is about all there is to say in the pennant talk of the day. The Braves are now leading by five full games, while the Giants are almost hopelessly lost. At the rate the three leading clubs are playing, the Cubs have it on the Giants, and can be given a better chance to win the pennant than the McGraw man-eaters. Watch the board today, and get the results of the double bills between the St. Louis Cardinals and Giants at New York, and the Cincy Reds and Braves at Boston. The Cubs play one game at Philadelphia in opening a new series.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE APOLLO. "Home, Sweet Home," one of the greatest human interest photoplays ever produced, is being shown at the Apollo today. It is a Griffith production which has won triumph after triumph all over this country.

A NOTABLE VAUDEVILLE ACT. An act of unusual prominence comes to the Apollo for the balance of the week beginning Thursday. Lee Tung Foo, the Chinese singer of his race has had many complimentary reviews. The New York Telegram says:

"Lee Tung Foo, the Chinese baritone at Hammerstein's, is an example in progress to all his countrymen. Had his race possessed in common some of the assimilating qualities which he possesses in particular, the Chinese would never have dropped behind in the march of civilization. Lee Tung Foo sings in a voice that is remarkable—for a Chinaman. He renders 'Der Mann im Keller' in the original with a broad Deutschland accent that savors of stings and Heidelberg. If the upper tones lack resonance, what of that? Lee Tung Foo sings on the low tones with a Teutonic growl that makes his almond eyes and his gaudy China silk embroideries look like a disguise."

"And when he follows this classic song with 'My Irish Molly O,' rendered in a brogue so irresistibly that the Hammerstein stage hands crowd into the wings to listen, the audience realizes that in this imitative Chinaman we have a Celestial Julius Tannan. A third imitation is to be found in Lee Tung Foo's interpolated remarks between songs. Here we have an echo of George M. Cohan."

This material, covering about the period between 1835 and 1850, was collected by Professor E. Kromers, director of the course in pharmacy, University of Wisconsin, and presents much interest for the students of medicine.
